

WRITER'S NOTE

Lovelash: A play on “whiplash,” defined as the emotional distress one experiences following a romantic relationship.

This show started off as a rant following an unfavourable experience with a prospective partner. However, much like the 15 page letter Rachel wrote to Ross, my rant would've put people to sleep. It needed a hook! Luckily, I just so happen to be a pop music enthusiast with a passion for storytelling.

I decided to set the show in the 90s for a variety of reasons. One, I'm a child of the era.. Two, it's the most recent time in modern history where face to face interaction was the societal norm. Besides, no one wants to see a play/musical about finding love over Tinder and Facebook. It would be as boring and frustrating as... well... finding love over Tinder and Facebook.

The sitcom and romcom route was an obvious choice for me. There's nothing like cozying up on the couch with a friend, partner, lapdog, or tub of cookie dough ice cream while watching When Harry Met Sally on endless loop. Plus, it never mattered how tense things got as everything sorted itself out by the end. Sure, sometimes it's a bit cheesy, or completely far fetched, but they always make us feel warm and fuzzy by the end (Except Alf. That series finale was twisted..)

Too many people to thank. To MTP for having faith in me and my work. It's hard to believe that I was pitching this show a year ago. To my cast and crew; without you, this show doesn't happen. To each and everyone of you who made it through my ramblings; I sincerely hope you all enjoy my story!

With Love... or like if you feel I'm going too fast...

Terence Vince

THANKS

Cast and Crew would like to thank the hardwork and guidance of the MTP. Many thanks to Original Kids Theatre Company, Matt Loop, Chris Montanini, Janis Wallace, and all those that support this labour of love.(lash)
